Conversation Guide: Black Women Answer the Call

Living Room Conversations offers a simple, sociable and structured way to practice communicating across differences while building understanding and relationships. Typically, 4–7 people meet in person or by video call for about 90 minutes to listen to and be heard by others on one of our more than 100 topics. Rather than debating or convincing others, we take turns talking to share and learn, and be curious. No preparation is required. This conversation includes the option of adding cultural elements. You can start with a moment of silence and thanksgiving for the lives of George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery, Tony McDade and Breonna Taylor and all those lost to racism and state violence. You may also pour libation as you say each name. In Black cultural traditions, the pouring of libation- pouring a bit of alcohol or water (representing life) onto the ground or into a plant- is done to honor and acknowledge the ancestors. The intention of this dialogue is to offer Black women a space to express their rage, their sorrow, their vulnerability, their power, and any other authentic expression of vulnerability that needs to be revealed. Anyone can host using these italicized instructions. Hosts also participate.

I. Introductions: Why We’re Here (~10 minutes)

Each participant has 1 minute to introduce themselves.

- Share your name, where you live, what drew you here, and if this is your first conversation.

II. Conversation Agreements: How We’ll Engage (~5 minutes)

These will set the tone of our conversation; participants may volunteer to take turns reading them aloud.

- Be curious and listen to understand. Conversation is as much about listening as it is about talking. You might enjoy exploring how others’ experiences have shaped their values and perspectives.

- Show respect and suspend judgment. People tend to judge one another. Setting judgement aside opens you up to learning from others and makes them feel respected and appreciated. Try to truly listen, without interruption or crosstalk.

- Note any common ground as well as any differences. Look for areas of agreement or shared values that may arise and take an interest in the differing beliefs and opinions of others.

- Be authentic and welcome that from others. Share what’s important to you. Speak from your experience. Be considerate of others who are doing the same.

- Be purposeful and to the point. Do your best to keep your comments concise and relevant to the question you are answering. Be conscious of sharing airtime with other participants.

- Own and guide the conversation. Take responsibility for the quality of your participation and the conversation as a whole. Be proactive in getting yourself and others back on track if needed. Use an agreed upon signal like the “time out” sign if you feel the agreements are not being honored.

III. Question Rounds: What We’ll Talk About

Optional: a participant can keep track of time and gently let people know when their time has elapsed.

Round One: Getting to Know Each Other (~10 min)

Each participant can take 1–2 minutes to answer one of these questions:

- What are your hopes and concerns for your family, community and/or the country?

This is an open source project. Please use, share and modify with attribution to LivingRoomConversations.org
(Round One questions continued)

- What would your best friend say about who you are?
- What sense of purpose / mission / duty guides you in your life?

Round Two: Exploring the Topic -- Black Women Answer the Call (~40 min)

One participant can volunteer to read this paragraph.

On May 25, 2020 George Floyd called his Mama. Not on the phone. He was calling out to her as his life was ended by a Minneapolis police officer who pressed his knee into Mr. Floyd’s neck for 8 minutes and 46 seconds. "Mama!" There was audible anguish heard in George Floyd's voice as this was captured on video. In the protests that have followed, one woman is shown holding a sign which reads, "All mothers were summoned when George Floyd called out for his Momma." And we were. During this Living Room Conversation, Black women are invited to voice and process the impact of these events on our psyches, our parenting, our work, and our presence in the world.

Take ~2 minutes each to answer a question below without interruption or crosstalk. After everyone has answered, the group may take a few minutes for clarifying or follow up questions/responses. Continue exploring additional questions as time allows.

- What thoughts and emotions have the murders of Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor, and George Floyd brought up in you? What has this been like for you?
- How has your reaction or the reaction of those around you surprised you?
- To what extent have recent events impacted your everyday life and movement in the world? How has home life and work shifted?
- What are you doing for self-care? How are your sleep patterns, exercise, eating, relating, intimacy, connection, spiritual practices?

Round Three: Reflecting on the Conversation (~15 min)

Take 2 minutes to answer one of the following questions:

- What was most meaningful / valuable to you in this Living Room Conversation?
- What learning, new understanding or common ground was found on the topic?
- How has this conversation changed your perception of anyone in this group, including yourself?

Conversations like the one we just had often move us to action-- a desire to do something with our emotions and experiences. What efforts are you currently involved in on the ground? What else are you feeling called to do?

Closing (~5 min)

- Give us feedback! Use livingroomconversations.org/feedback-form/ or QR code
- Donate! Make more of these possible; give at livingroomconversations.org/donate/
- Join or host more conversations! With a) this group by exchanging your emails; b) others in person and/or by video call online. Get more involved or learn how to host at livingroomconversations.org/get-involved/

Thank you!

This is an open source project. Please use, share and modify with attribution to LivingRoomConversations.org